Personal Repository: https://github.com/zmorgancs/Group8
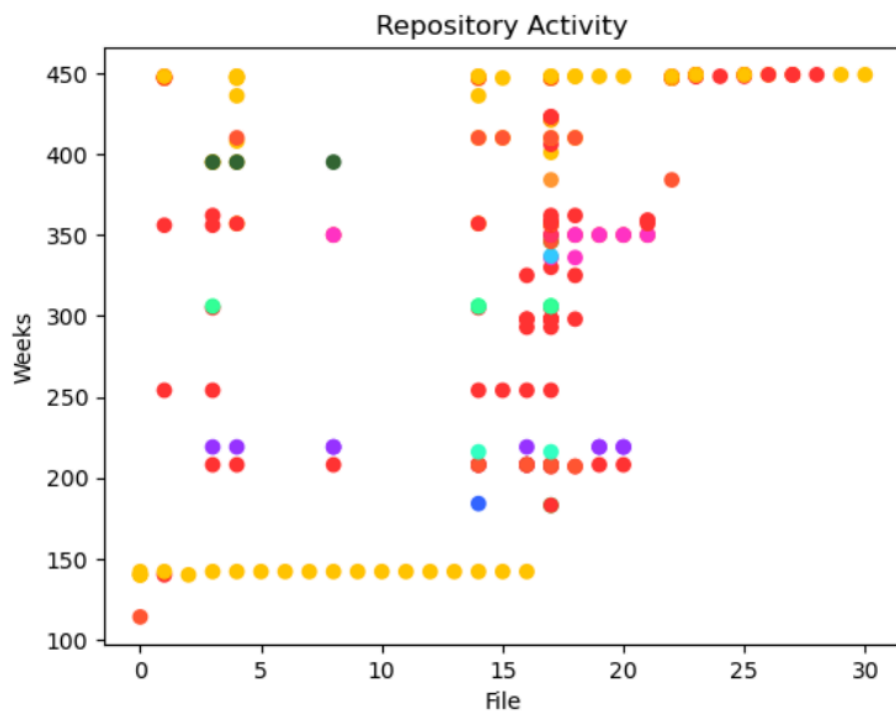

Notes on the Table:
- There were 31 unique files collected, each ending with either .cpp, .java and .kt as their file extension.
- There are 15 unique contributors documented on this graph below, each represented with an individual color value.

Contributor Rankings:
1. Scottyab (Scott Alexander-Brown)   - 51 commits
2. Stealthcopter (Mathew Rollings)   - 46 commits
3. Friederbluemle (Frieder Bluemle)   - 7 commits
4. Altvnv (Aliaksei Litvinau)   - 5 commits

Assorted Github Findings:
- Commands: git log, git log --summary
    - Very useful for project documentation for large repositories like this one as it provides an overview of the commit history of the repository.
- Commands: git clone, git branch [name]
    - The cloning and branching features are an incredible tool for contributors as they allow for development of independent features for a product with less risk of conflicts between contributors. When developers seek to merge their branches with the main repository github provides a clear readout of what is being changed and what conflicts may have to be resolved so the contributors collectively can come to a consensus on how to implement any suggested changes.